This morning at the Magistracy Chan San and Kam a Lam, the contractors for the excavations at Seymour Road by which seven men were killed yesterday, were brought before Captain Hastings at the Magistracy, charged by Inspector Hennessy with unlawfully causing the death of Wong a Pun and six others, through negligence on the 19th inst. They pleaded not gullty. and the case was remanded till Friday, 26th inst., at 10 s.m. Ball for each prisoner was fixed at $5000, in two sureties of $2,500 each

Ma H. E. Wodehouse held an inquiry this morning into the circumstances connected with the death of a Chinaman on the night of 15th inst. A. Kamer, clerk to Messra Arnhold, Karberg and Co., stated that about 7 o'clock on the night of the 15th inst. he was standing on the verandah of the hong near Pedder's wharf. He heard the splash of a man falling into the water, and saw a Chinaman throw a life buoy to the man in the water. Witness then went down to the street, and was told that the man had disappeared. There were only a few Chinamen standing about. He thought all was done that could be done to save the man's life except jumping into the water. A bystender told withten that he saw the decessed jump into the water. Evidence having been given of the recovery of the body a verdict of 'found drowned was recorded.

Ar the Magistracy this morning Mr H. E. Wodehouse held an enquiry into the circomstances connected with the drowning of John Robertson, able seaman, Empress of China, in the harbour on the evening of Saturday, 6th inst. It was stated by chipmate that he left Pedder's Wharf in a sampan along with the decessed, at 9.30 p.m. They got alongside the Empress of China about 10 o'clock. Robertson was the worse for liquor, and had to be helped upon the gangway by the witness and a sampan stan. When he got to the fourth step he overbalanced, and all three fell. The deceased and the sampan man fell into the water. With the aid of one of the quartermasters, the witness rescued the Chinaman, but no sign was seen of Robert son. The decessed was a Canadian ; about 28 years of age. A lance-corporal of the Royal Engineers spoke to having found the body on the beach at Belcher's Point on Monday, 15th inst. His Worship found that deceased was accidentally drowned.

those present. The reference library is now well supplibranches of engineering and shipbuilding and the kindred sciences, and, when properly arranged and catalogued, will, we trust, supply a much felt want amongst our sea-going members. A circulating library has been started and members may effect an exchange of novels.

During the year your Managing Committee had at various times discussed the advisability of appointing a European manager, and, as the finances seemed to warrant the extra expenditure, they secured the services of Mr J. The possibilities of a new political part of the platform was among the developments of the day's session. The day was devoted to expressions of opinion by the Representatives of the different States. They were uniformly to the effect that the working people and the families are dissatisfied with the source of Congress in repealing the purchase clause of the Shor-

Senators Jones and Stewart, Master Werkman Severaign of the Kuighte of Labor and National Locturer Whitchead of the Grangers were among the speakers during the afternoon. During the address of Senator Jones an interesting collectuy occurred between him and Master Workman Sovereign. The latter suggested that when the ranks of labor had satisfied toward ascuring free silver there should be a reciprocity by which the silver loadors should assist in scouring labor reform. Jones contended that all labor questions were merged in the money question, and that its solution would settle them all Sovereign and the Senator at last met on common ground in agreeing that the salver question should be made the paremount issue of all labor and industrial organiza-

Frequent references were made during the speeches of to-day to the mecessity of organising a silver party orande up of the elements beretofore gathered under the standard of the Populists, the National Grange, the Knights of Labors the Farmers' Alliance, etc. The tendency of the conference is toward this newnorganto carry the Congressional elections next

The one now London is about the same size, and is desoribed as being thirty-three and a half inches in its longest circomference. Even this does not convey much idea of its real magnitude, which perhaps can be best appreciated by cutting an eval in paper thirteen inches in length and nine inches across.

This specimen was found floating in the sea off the south-west coast of Madagasons. and was probably disinterred from the sandhills by a storm. It is in the south of the island, especially between Cape St. Mary and Machikova; that all the known finds have occurred. One egg was found while some the shell has been met with in a recent frightening patients into thinking there is no geologia formation. The surface of an hope. Appornis egg is granulated. that of one species of ostrich, and the substance of the shell is remarkably strong. Its colour is a creamy white. It is thought that the bird may perhaps have existed during our era, but it has at any rate been lost for nearly 2,000 years. The Mos, on the other hand, disappeared no longer ago than the Great Auk, for in 1844 an old Maori, who claimed to have seen Captain Cook, declared that he himself had seen the huge, night-wandering bird. It was believed then that it still existed in the South Island, and stories were current of two old settlers who had eaten its flesh. The Moa was killed off by native Moa hunters, and it is chiefly from the Kitchen middens—the heaps of refuse they have left-that its remains are recovered. That longer the flesh was cooked, in fact, the worse it was to eat. No one possesses a Dodo's egg. No one even knows what it was like. Our only information, on the point is the somewhat inexact description given by a French writer of the year 1561, that it was about the size of a halfpenny roll . It may well be imagined that, to a collector, the egg of a Mos or an Apyornis would be a treasure indeed. Yet the egg of the Great Auk is. more highly prized than either. The highest price paid for an Æpyornis egg is 1001. The last Great Ank's egg that came into the market—there are sixty-nine of them in existence, so far as is knownchanged hands at 2281. It is hardly to be wondered at that the happy possessor of seven out of the sixty-nine keeps his treasures in an iron safe. If the lost bird of Madagascar did not rival in stature the Mos or even the ostrich, it was a creature of no mean dimensions. Among the few remains of its skeleton is a thigh bone, no less than 25 inches long. It may, after all, have been the original of the Roc, so
